THE INTERNATIONAL CONGRESS.

The Congress of American Nations met yesterday in Washington and was partially organized by the election of Secretary Blaine President and Hon. John B. Henderson of Missouri Temporary President. A committee was also appointed, with the Mexican minister, Senor Romero, at its head, to report at the next meeting a list of committees to take charge of the various subjects that will occupy the attention of the Congress. Then an adjournment was taken till Monday, November 18th. The Congress has accepted the invitation of the President of the United States to make a tour of the country. The train which is to convey the delegates on their excursion to furnish the Pennsylvania railroad, and arrived at Washington yesterday. It consists of seven cars, the first containing barber, bathroom and smoking apartments, the second is a dining room car, the third a sleeper for the railroad officials and members of the press accompanying the party, and the fourth, fifth, sixth and seventh for the accommodation of the various delegations.

The importance of this Congress will be understood from the following announcement of the objects which it was called to consider:

First—Measures that shall tend to preserve the peace and promote the prosperity of the several American States.
Secondly—Measures toward the formation of an American Customs Union, under which the trade of the American nations with each other, shall so far as possible be profitable and promoted.
Thirdly—The establishment of regular and frequent communication between the ports of the several American States, and the ports of each of them.

Fourthly—The establishment of a uniform system of customs regulations in each of the independent American States, to govern the mode of importation and exportation of merchandise and port dues and charges, and the subject of the sanitation and quarantine.

Fifthly—The adoption of a uniform system of weights and measures, and laws to protect the patent rights, copyrights, and trade marks, and the subject of the sanitation and quarantine.
Sixthly—The adoption of a common silver coin, to be issued by each government, the same to be a legal tender in all commercial transactions between the citizens of all the American States.
Seventhly—An agreement upon and recommendation to the several States, to the effect of a definite plan of arbitration of all questions, disputes and differences that may now or hereafter exist between them, to the end that all difficulties and disputes between the nations may be peaceably settled and wars prevented.

Eighthly—And to consider such other subjects relating to the welfare of the American States as may be presented by any of said States.

To the statesmanship and perseverance of Mr. Blaine the assembling of this Congress is due. It was a favorite subject with him eight years ago, when he was Secretary of State in Garfield's administration. The death of the President and Mr. Blaine's retirement from office caused the subject to be dropped, and the succeeding administrations gave it the cold shoulder. If its deliberations result in nothing more than better acquaintance, a more friendly understanding and an increased knowledge among the American states south of us of the greatness, the wealth and power of the United States and the superiority of our civilization over theirs, it will be worth all that it cost. But Mr. Blaine has larger expectations of the fruit of its work. His speech of welcome to the delegates yesterday is published elsewhere. It is a masterpiece of pure English, as well as a statesmanlike presentation of his subject, wholly devoid of that jingoism which the Secretary's enemies are in the practice of attributing to him. Mr. Blaine has never appeared to better advantage before the country than in this great address, which is destined to be preserved to history as one of the choicest gems of American oratory.

THE PAN-AMERICAN CONGRESS.

Secretary Blaine's Welcome to the Delegates to the Greatness of Our Continent Described.

The following is the address of welcome by Secretary Blaine to the delegates of the American International Congress, at its meeting in Washington for organization yesterday.

Gentlemen of the International American Conference:

Speaking for the government of the United States, I bid you welcome to this Capital. Speaking for the people of the United States, I bid you welcome to every section of every state of the Union. You come in response to an invitation extended by the President on the special authorization of Congress. Your presence here is no ordinary event. It signifies much to the people of all America to-day. It may signify far more in the days to come. No conference of nations has ever assembled to consider the welfare of territorial possessions so vast, and to contemplate the possibilities of a future so great and so inspiring. Those now sitting within these walls are empowered to speak for nations whose borders are on both the great oceans; whose northern limits are touched by the Arctic waters for a thousand miles beyond the Straits of Behring; whose southern extension furnishes human habitations far below the equator than is elsewhere possible on the globe. The aggregate territorial extent of the nations here represented falls but little short of 12,000,000 square miles—more than three times the area of all Europe, and but little less than one-fourth part of the globe; while in respect to the power of producing the articles which are essential to human life and those which constitute the necessities of civilization, even a larger proportion of the entire world. These great possessions to-day have an aggregate population approaching 120,000,000; but if peopled as densely as the average of Europe, the total number would exceed 1,000,000,000.

While considerations of this character must inspire Americans, both South and North, with the liveliest anticipations of future grandeur and power, they must also impress them with the sense of the gravest responsibility touching the character and development of their respective nationalities. The delegates whom I am addressing can do much to establish permanent relations of confidence, respect and friendship between the nations which they represent. They can show to the world an honorable and peaceful conference of seventeen independent American powers, in which all shall meet together on terms of absolute equality; a conference in which there can be no attempt to coerce a single delegate against his own conception of the interests of his nation; a conference which will permit no secret understanding on any subject, but will frankly publish to the world all its conclusions; a conference which will tolerate no spirit of conquest, but will aim to cultivate an American sympathy as broad as both continents; a conference which will form no selfish alliance against the older nations from which we are proud to claim inheritance; a conference, in fact, which will seek nothing, propose nothing, endure nothing, that is not, in the general sense of all the delegates, timely and wise and peaceful.

I and yet we cannot but be expected to forget that our common fate has made us inhabitants of two continents which, at the close of four centuries, are still regarded by the seas as the New World. Like situations beget like sympathies and impose like duties. We meet in the firm belief that the nations of America ought to and can be more helpful, each to the other, than they now are, and that each will find advantage and profit from an enlarged intercourse with the others.

We believe that we should be drawn together more closely by the highways of the sea, and that at no distant day the great systems of the North and South will meet upon the Isthmus, and connect by land routes the political and commercial capitals of all America. We believe that hearty co-operation, based on hearty confidence, will save all American States from the burdens and evils which have long and cruelly afflicted the nations of the world. We believe that a spirit of justice, of common and equal interest, between the American States will leave no room for an artificial balance of power like unto that which has led to wars abroad and drenched Europe in blood. We believe that friendship, avowed with candor and maintained with good faith, will remove from the American States the necessity of guarding boundary lines between themselves with fortifications and military forces. We believe that standing armies, beyond those which are needed for public order and the safety of internal administration, should be unknown on both American continents. We believe that friendship and not force, the spirit of just law and not the violence of the mob, should be the recognized rule of administration between American nations and in American nations.

To these subjects, and those which are cognate thereto, the attention of this conference is earnestly and cordially invited by the Government of the United States. It will be a great gain when we shall acquire that common confidence on which all internal friendship must rest. It will be a greater gain when we shall be able to draw the people of all American nations into closer acquaintance with each other—and to be facilitated by more frequent and more rapid intercommunication. It will be the greatest gain when the personal and commercial relations of the American States, South and North, shall be so developed and so regulated that each shall acquire the highest possible advantage from the enlightened and enlarged intercourse of all.

Before the conference shall formally enter upon the discussion of the subjects to be submitted to it, I am instructed by the President to invite all the delegates to be the guests of the government during a proposed visit to various sections of the country, with a double view of showing to our friends from abroad the condition of the United States, and of giving to our own people, in their homes, the privilege and pleasure of extending the warm welcome of Americans to Americans.

BOWSER TRIES TO DO AN ODD JOB.

(From the Detroit Free Press.)

There were several little things I wanted done about the house this fall, and so the other week I engaged a colored man to come and work for a couple of days. It so happened that he came one morning before Mr.

Bowser had left the house, and was greeted with:

"Well, what'n you now?"

"Who hired you?"

"De lady, sah."

"What to do?"

"Jobbin', sah."

"Well, what'n you has changed her mind and doesn't want you?"

After the man had gone Mr. Bowser came into the house and asked:

"Did you hire a colored man?"

"Why, yes?"

"What for?"

"I was going to have him whitewash the vegetable cellar, take down and clean the laundry stove and do some other odd jobs."

"I'm! Mrs. Bowser, I don't believe in encouraging such people. He'd have done about one hour's work and charged you for a whole day. I don't believe he knows any more about whitewashing than I do about playing the harp."

"But he said he did."

"Certainly. Did you ever see a Negro who wouldn't say anything to fit the occasion?"

"Well, but—"

"There's no 'but' about it. If there are any little jobs about the house I've got plenty of time to do them. In fact I need just such exercise. Such work is a diversion for me, and the doctor recommends it."

"Do you mean to say you will do the white-washing?"

"I do. I don't do it to save a dollar, but Large hats with low crowns and projecting brims, short at the back, and very simi-imported in felt and velvet. Some of the Parisian models are exceedingly picturesque, and far too elaborate and striking for street to match English sailor gowns which combine these colors.

A lovely tint of English rose appears among the new evening cloths. It is a fascinating shade of pink, even more beautiful than the latest shade of vieux-rose. Perhaps a delicate woman, or a brown-haired, brown-eyed one, with a complexion never darker more beautiful than when she appears in a certain delicate shade of rose color. An evening dress of this new particular shade of pink, brocaded with pale yellow primrose blossoms and foliage, is light and dainty, just what with stoles of primrose-yellow crepe de chine.

The half-low bodices is finely finished with a tulle of the crepe de chine, which is softly folded over the chest with infinite grace and tied at the side, falling in long ends.

Although novel and striking in many respects, still the autumn tailor fabrics as a whole will lead great variety and brilliancy to the season's costume. The bordered woolens are considered first choice, but the choice is unlimited, and those who prefer a different style of goods have every opportunity to suit their individual fancy. Among the popular fabrics for tailor gowns are new flexible London diagonals, French camel's hair serges, wool amirans, exquisitely soft and fine, Carmelite wools, extra fine ladies' cloth, fancy Belvedere, and velvet suitings, and an endless importation of Henriettes, Chaiettes and other light wool materials.

People fond of gay bright dresses have plenty of novelties of a striking kind where-to gratify their tastes this season. Some of the best goods are of a very dainty color, not only in brilliancy, but in combination. Some of the mixtures which are now termed the "quiet" ones are what two years ago would have been deemed quite extraordinary. There is something, however, that is exhilarating in the rush of gorgeous coloring and this clever mixture of tints and textures before understood. Perhaps the kindly pioneers of fashion have determined to give us a series of new rainbows as a sort of consolation for the wet and sunless season just passed.

The fashionable colors are a new tone of apple-green and a new chrome, which is the exact tint of the inside of a peacock; and mica is quite new, a yellowish bronze, with a dash of mustard thrown in, bright and really beautiful and most becoming to brunettes.

Anopole is good, so is ermine, light yellow and several grays. Mouse is still quite popular, and serpentine. De Vinci is a new and beautiful tint of the heliotrope tone, or rather petunia, which was worn eight years ago, and is now once more to the fore, and many new shades of violet rose will be worn.

Long redingote gowns, French polonaises,

Directoire coats, and plain skirts are represented in the latest importations. Wool dresses are either bordered, striped or in plaids; and although a large portion of the dresses received are made of one sort of material alone, still, there are also combinations of wool stuffs of two kinds, as a velvet skirt with plain cloth redingote, or else two colors of a plain fabric, as a golden chestnut redingote, or coat with green skirt that is bordered with golden chestnut stripes in handsome shadings.

Youthful-looking Directoire gowns show the waists cut off short at the back, and capture in length from hip to foot, not pointed behind as usual. To this the closely-gathered skirt is added. In front, the bodice is cut away straight and square like a Russian jacket, with a soft full skirt, and a surplice blouse beneath. The bodice is made of one kind of some soft wool or silk material. The skirt matches the blouse in color and fabric.

It has long square ends and is loosely tied.

The picturesque Venetian collar will be worn both this and next season on demi-turban and tea-gowns, which term now definitely includes a particular style of evening dress. One extremely handsome model of the kind is of taupe de Nil color, flowered in pink and honeysuckle yellow, with a loose front of pink crepe de chine, and a full skirt of the pink; a large Venetian collar all of Ways of Baking Graham Flour.

A correspondent writes: "By this time everybody knows how to make Graham 'crumbs' by the usual method, which is simply to stir the batter just a little stiffer than griddle-cake batter and bake quickly in a very hot oven. This thing is certain, the thinner the batter the hotter must be the oven. It is also the case that gems mixed with water require a hotter oven than those mixed with milk. So, if you cannot have a very hot oven, either make the mixture of simple graham flour and water quite thick, or mix the flour with milk. Skimmed milk is good enough, though cream or cream milk makes the bread more 'short,' of course. Have the gems pan very hot—set them in the oven before filling them—and then as soon as the batter is in the pan, but before it has had time to bubble over the iron will prevent the gems from burning. Housekeepers who have no gem pans can make very nice warm graham bread for breakfast in several ways. Make a dough of flour and sweet milk, skimmed or creamy, as you prefer or find convenient, knead it enough to roll out easily. Knead this a little, roll it into a thin sheet, and cut it into diamonds; or cut off strips and cut it into rolls with the hand; or roll it into balls two inches in diameter, flattening them a little, or not at all, as you wish. Bake them on a hot fire, or in a hot oven, until they are browned and crisp. Crackers are best with some cream in the mixing, and crackers require more kneading than diamonds and rolls, which are expected to be soft inside. Any of these kinds of bread, diamonds, rolls, balls and crackers, are baked upon the grates in the oven, which should be wiped off very clean. They will not stick to it, and will bake very fast. I recommend the crackers in particular. All these breads are sweeter and better, I think, and we all like them so at our house, without salt, but most people prefer salt in the crackers."

Affairs of Friendly Societies.

The Odd Fellows' creed is simple. It is the Fatherhood of God, the brotherhood of man. It enforces and exemplifies as the cardinal duty of the order, "To relieve the sick, to bury the dead and to educate the orphan." How faithfully this cardinal principle is carried out is known to all. The Odd Fellows' ship does not "sound a trumpet before it" in the market place when it does a charity; but Odd Fellows know what sick have been relieved, what dead have been buried, what orphans and widows cared for.

Ways of Making Graham Flour.

A correspondent writes: "By this time everybody knows how to make Graham 'gems' by the usual method, which is simply to stir the batter just a little stiffer than griddle-cake batter and bake quickly in a very hot oven. This thing is certain, the thinner the batter the hotter must be the oven. It is also the case that gems mixed with water require a hotter oven than those mixed with milk. So, if you cannot have a very hot oven, either make the mixture of simple graham flour and water quite thick, or mix the flour with milk. Skimmed milk is good enough, though new or creamy milk makes the bread more 'short,' of course. Have the gem pans very hot. I set them in the oven before filling them and then ascertained the heat by putting a bit of butter upon it rubbed over the iron will prevent the gems from sticking. Housekeepers who have no gem pans can make very nice warm graham bread for breakfast in several ways. Make a dough of flour and sweet milk, skimmed or creamy, as you prefer or find convenient, still enough to roll out easily. Knead this a little, roll it an inch thick and cut it into diamonds, or cut out strips and make it into rolls with the hands, or roll it into balls two inches in diameter, flattening them a little, or not at all, as you choose; or roll the dough very thin and cut into square crackers, or cut them into balls to prevent their pulling. Crackers are best with some cream in the mixing, and crackers require more kneading than diamonds and rolls, which are expected to be soft inside. All of these kinds of bread, rolls, diamonds, balls and crackers, are baked upon the griddle in the oven, which should be wiped off very clean. They will not stick to it, and will bake very fast. I recommend the crackers in particular. All these breads are sweetened and better, I think, and we all think so at our house, without salt, but most people prefer salt in the crackers."

Affairs of Friendly Societies.

It enforces and exemplifies the cardinal duty in the order of life, to be true to duty to the dead and to educate the orphan. How faithfully this cardinal principle is carried out is known to a few. Odd Fellowship does not "sound a trumpet before it" in the market place. It is a quiet, steady, but Old Fellows know what has been achieved, what dead have been buried, what orphans and widows cared for.
